
Jennifer Fraser is Associate Professor of Ethnomusicology and Anthropology at Oberlin College. She offers a range of experiential learning opportunities, from immersive trips to Indonesia to soundscape studies of Oberlin, digital humanities projects using archival materials, and community-based learning projects working with low-income kids in Lorain. This semester she is offering a class at the intersection of literary, visual and performing arts that involves Oberlin’s wayang (Javanese shadow puppet) collection.

Angela is a reference & learning technologies librarian and assistant professor at the Lawrence University Seeley G. Mudd Library. She coordinates and teaches classes in the campus makerspace, provides reference instruction, teaches game studies, maintains the library’s outreach and web presence, and a bunch of other stuff.